On anniversary of daughter's murder by a career criminal, her father begs lawmakers to pass habitual offender bill Melissa's Bill would deny parole after third violent offense

NICOLAUS CZARNECKI/METRO

▶ Sen. Bruce Tarr and Les Gosule, left, hug in the Garden of Peace after Gosule urged legislators to pass Melissas Bill yesterday. The bill is named after Gosule's daughter, Melissa, who was raped and murdered by a man with nearly 30 arrests on his record.

Father pleads for law change

Les Gosule can't kiss his daughter anymore, so yesterday, on the 13th anniversary of her disappearance and murder, he knelt down and kissed the stone engraved with her name.

Gosule visited his daughter's memorial stone in the Garden of Peace in Boston after speaking to reporters about a habitual offender bill that he is pushing to finally get passed.

The bill, which would deny parole for those convicted of their third violent offense, is currently in a conference committee with the legislative session ending this month. The bill has been submitted multiple times over the past decade without success.

Gosule, whose 27-year-old daughter Melissa was raped and murdered after her car broke down near the Cape Cod Canal, pleaded with legislators to move the bill forward.

"They can't give me a straight answer, but they give me hugs, they give me handshakes," said Gosule. "I'm getting some great hugs, but I'm not getting the bill."

Joining Gosule were officers from various police departments, including Woburn Police Chief Robert Ferullo.

Woburn officer Jack Maguire was killed Dec. 26, 2010 by a career criminal out on parole.

"I urge you to put the bill forward so my guys can go to work feeling safe," Ferullo said.

Those who oppose the bill claim it will lead to overcrowding of prisons and an increased cost of incarceration.

Those who support the bill feel time is running out as there are about three weeks left in the legislative session.

"Enough time has gone by … that we need the bill," Gosule said. "We can't stop all crime, but we should be able to stop crime that's habitual."

Bill close?

Both the House and Senate have passed versions of the bill and are now working out differences between the bills.

Many issues, such as a reduction in the size of the zone around schools that carry harsher penalties for drug crimes, have been resolved, according to conferees.

"We're very close to resolution on the remaining issues. I would say we're probably only one or two meetings from finalizing it," said state Sen. Bruce Tarr.

Tarr identified the issue of sentencing reform, and whether to include it at all in a final bill, as one of the outstanding issues in conference, as well as agreement on the list of crimes that would trigger habitual offender status for a criminal. He said resolving the list of crimes was "not insurmountable." SHNS

Piggybacking fare jumpers cited and arrested on various unrelated warrants

BOSTON. Three men were caught piggybacking through the fare gates at Downtown Crossing at 4:45 p.m. Tuesday, but didn't make it far before plainclothes officers caught up with them.

Piggybacking is when people follow behind paying customers through the open fare gates.

The fare jumpers were each issued $50 citations

MBTA Superintendent-in-Chief Joseph O'Connor said they were all cited $50, and two of them were arrested on warrants.

Another person was cited for skipping fare at 6 p.m. Tuesday, and was also arrested on a warrant, O'Connor said.

Transit police have not noticed a significant spike in fare evasions since T fares were increased earlier this month, he said. METRO

Mass. sees biggest decline in business-friendly survey

BOSTON. Some state officials are not fazed by a new CNBC survey putting Massachusetts in the middle of the pack in a ranking of best states for business. The state fell from sixth to 28th in the survey published on Tuesday, marking the "biggest decline" of any of the 50 contenders.

But in a statement Tuesday, Gov. Deval Patrick said the state in recent years has cut corporate taxes and "burdensome regulations," reduced health care and energy costs and continued "record investments" in education, innovation and infrastructure.

House Minority Leader Brad Jones called the numbers "egregious." METRO

Recent studies have linked hearing loss to dementia and Alzheimer's. According to Johns Hopkins and the National Institute of Aging, the risk of dementia is doubled with a mild hearing loss and a severe loss increases your risk by five times. Early treatment of hearing loss is recommended. At Preferred Hearing Care our mission is to educate our patients and community about hearing loss and the importance of early detection and treatment.

State Rep.'s accuser speaks out

The college student who is accusing state Rep. Carlos Henriquez of abusing and kidnapping her told reporters yesterday that her story is true.

"My credibility has been questioned, and my private life has become the topic of speculation," said Katherine Gonzalves, 23, "but I am not afraid to speak out and have my voice heard. I am here because I did nothing wrong."

Henriquez, who represents parts of Dorchester and Roxbury, pleaded not guilty during his arraignment Monday. The 35-year-old allegedly punched and strangled Gonzalves after he picked her up at her mother's house at 2:30 a.m. Sunday, according to a police report. He then drove around Boston, allegedly refusing to let her out of the car until she managed to jump out near Northeastern University.

Police in their report noted scuff marks on her shin and multiple bruises on her arms and wrist.

She met Henriquez in February after hearing him speak and asking him for help with research on a college paper she was working on. The couple then started a dating relationship.

Gonzalves spoke yesterday at her lawyer's Back Bay office.

Her attorney, Rick Brody, called Gonzalves a "courageous young woman."

"All too often, defendants are provided a forum to advocate for themselves while victims struggle to make their voice heard," Brody said.

After his arraignment Monday, Henriquez's lawyer said they were shocked by the charges. He released a statement Monday night.

"I have been accused of some serious charges, these allegations are completely untrue," Henriquez said in his statement. "I have dedicated myself to protecting women, not abusing or assaulting them. Putting my hands on a woman is contradictory to my upbringing and my own morals."

More charges

Police in Arlington have also filed charges against Henriquez.

Police there charged him with kidnapping, larceny, witness intimidation and three counts of assault and battery, according to the Herald.

An arraignment date was not set as of press time.

BANGKOK. Thailand's king has pardoned a U.S. citizen who was jailed for two and a half years last December for insulting the monarchy, a case that prompted rare U.S. criticism of its Southeast Asian ally, and calls for it to respect freedom of expression.

Romney booed at NAACP convention

HOUSTON. Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney was booed by an African-American crowd yesterday when he told them he would eliminate President Barack Obama's signature policy achievement, the U.S. health care overhaul.

Romney's conservative message did not go down very well at the annual convention of the NAACP, a civil rights organization whose African-American members are among Obama's strongest supporters.

The reaction was not uniformly negative. Romney received a standing ovation at the end and there were numerous instances of applause throughout the speech. REUTERS

Obama backed by single people, Romney by married couples

President Barack Obama's slim lead over Republican rival Mitt Romney in the White House race is fueled by a broad marriage gap, with Obama enjoying a big advantage among single voters — particularly women, a Quinnipiac University poll found yesterday.

Obama leads among single voters by 54 percent to 34 percent, while married voters back Romney 51 percent to 38 percent, the poll found.

Obama has a huge advantage with single women, 60 percent to 31 percent, while Romney leads among married women 49 percent to 42 percent. Romney leads by 19 percentage points among married men, and Obama leads by 9 points among single men.

The poll showed Obama with an overall 3-point national edge on Romney, 46 percent to 43 percent, four months before the November 6 election.

"Although much has been made about the gender gap and how Obama's lead among women fuels his campaign, the marriage gap is actually larger and more telling," said Quinnipiac pollster Peter Brown.

"Married people are more likely to be older, more financially secure and more socially conservative than unmarried voters," he said. "Married voters are more likely to focus on the economy and health care, while single voters are more focused on issues such as gay rights and reproductive issues." REUTERS

Warm 2011 shows climate change despite La Nina

Last year was among the 15 warmest since recordkeeping began in the late 19th century, despite a La Nina weather pattern that should have cooled global temperatures, according to an annual climate assessment.

La Nina's failure to cause significantly cooler global temperatures is one of many indications of long-term climate warming, according to the U.S. National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's State of the Climate report compiled by 378 scientists from 48 nations. La Nina was responsible for droughts in eastern Africa and North America, the scientists reported.

Last year "will be remembered as a year of extreme events, both in the United States and around the world," Deputy NOAA Administrator Kathryn D. Sullivan said in a statement. "Every weather event that happens now takes place in the context of a changing global environment."

Texas had the hottest summer since data collection began in 1895 and extreme heat may be more common in the future.

"Conditions leading to droughts such as the one that occurred in Texas in 2011 are, at least in the case of temperature, distinctly more probable than they were 40-50 years ago," according to the study. It used as a proxy 2008, another La Nina year, in which it found extreme heat was about 20 times more likely than in the 1960s.

Carbon dioxide emissions increased in 2011 and the yearly global average surpassed 390 parts per million for the first time since records started. BLOOMBERG

DirecTV, Viacom talks fail to break impasse

NEW YORK. DirecTV said its customers were left without Nickelodeon, MTV, Comedy Central and 14 other channels yesterday after Viacom Inc. demanded that its networks be dropped from DirecTV's lineup in a dispute over fees.

DirecTV, the largest U.S. satellite TV provider with nearly 20 million subscribers, said its executives had approached Viacom with a new proposal and a request to continue broadcasting the channels as talks proceeded, but received no response.

DirecTV's contract with Viacom expired at midnight Tuesday.

Barker staying grounded

▶ Barker will be sticking to the road this time out.

Four years after surviving a deadly plane crash, Travis Barker is still understandably hesitant to fly, and his travel restrictions are making the latest Blink-182 tour a little difficult.

"This will be the big tour that supports the album in Europe. Mind you, I'm not flying, so it's hard to say what the band could do or what its potential is, because I can't really get everywhere," the drummer tells Red Bulletin magazine.

Barker is, however, planning to give it another go if the tour takes them down under. "I'm contemplating getting knocked out and getting on a plane to Australia. I want to overcome that eventually," he says. "When I do, I think it's going to be Qantas. They never had a crash, never had a fatality — knock on wood. It's something I want to overcome."

We salute you, Travis! Take care and treat yourself to some premium tranquilizers — you could totally afford to hire Ira Glass to talk about baby kangaroos for the entire 20 hours.

Stonestreet's other family

"Modern Family" star Eric Stonestreet found his superpampered dog Coleman at an animal shelter in 2000, although things didn't start out so smoothly. "He scratched me, then bit my hand," he tells People of the beagle mix, who has his own Twitter account (reserve your judgment — more than 3,000 of you people follow him). "I knew I had to take him home, and he has been my best friend ever since."

Perhaps too soon, Sheen?

Charlie Sheen was on hand Tuesday evening to honor Slash, who received a star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame. Sheen didn't, however, have kind words for other members of Guns N' Roses.

"It's quite fitting that Slash is getting a star on the very street Axl Rose will one day be sleeping on," he said.

Well played, Charlie — just make sure you don't pass out on Hollywood Boulevard anytime soon.

What's missing here?

"Jersey Shore" just wrapped up taping its final season, but The Situation is still hoping to capitalize on his tanned-and-toned fame. The first outlets of his "GTL" salons — equipped with, yes, gyms, tanning beds and laundromats — are set to open in Miami and New York, reports In Touch.

Are we missing something, or is there no bar? This guy was probably our last hope for happy hour on the elliptical — JWoww babe, don't let the dream die.

When are you exclusive?

From recent reports it seems that actors Michelle Williams and Jason Segel have quietly crossed that line between playing with the idea of being exclusive and committing to being a couple. They have been seen holding hands and gazing into each other's eyes. They are both known for taking their time when it comes to romance. It raises the question: How does a hopeful pair get from one point to the next? When do you actually become an exclusive couple?

One of my patients was pondering this recently, and she asked me when it is appropriate to have the conversation and negotiate the terms of becoming a committed couple. I told her that in order to gauge that, you want to look at what is going on between the two of you.

Being exclusive is the exciting hill everyone wants to get over in a new, promising relationship. And there will be definite signs that you are successfully making that climb. There is the obvious: If you begin to refer to each other, and to introduce each other, as boyfriend and girlfriend. Other clues are when you start to show your affection in public by holding hands and touching, making the statement that you belong together, or the biggie: You start saying "I love you." And the best indication of all is that you no longer want to date other people or even leave that door open for the possibility. When it becomes clear that you are focusing your energy and heart on that one person, and that it is a mutual choice, that is a good time to check in to determine if you are now being exclusive.

Once you decide you are each other's one and only, you will be able to usher in the emotional and sexual trust and safety that most people crave. You want "the talk" my patient was referring to — and even more importantly, you want the move toward steady dating. You want to acknowledge what is already happening between the two of you rather than be in a negotiation to put something in place the way it seems to be for Michelle and Jason.

Government should help those trying to help themselves

RE: "YOU'LL MISS MINIMUM WAGE WHEN ROBOTS ARRIVE": This is to Daniel Green: With all of your wisdom, I hope you also realize that there is a generation of 20-somethings drowning in tens of thousands of dollars of crippling student loan debt and that higher education isn't always an option. Maybe instead of criticizing those that do work those 2-3 part-time jobs, you should be thankful you don't have to worry about minimum wage pay to begin with — at least that's what it sounds like from the pedestal you're preaching off of. We live in a society where these jobs are a gift to the underpaid and underemployed — or someone like myself, trying to pay for college. The 10-cent raise every year probably isn't gonna break the big business piggy bank.

Don't do the climb if you can't treat the Lyme

This is just friendly feedback: Lyme disease is caused by a bacteria, not a virus, and it's called Borrelia burgdorferi. It's from the same family of bacteria as syphilis. Bacteria are treated with antibiotics, not viruses. Antibiotics do not work on bacteria.

Blame game played in the past — and future, too!

RE: "CLINTON AND DEMS SOW SEEDS OF FAILURE": Sorry, but nearly everything Raymond Collins mentions is either incorrect or simply irrelevant to the original point. Yes, banking deregulation began under Clinton — but it was under Bush's watch (and his encouragement) that Wall Street created and pursued the labyrinthine schemes that resulted in the 2008 meltdown. The subprime mortgage market (another Bush creation) was utterly tangential to the crisis. Further, I remind everyone of Senator Mitch McConnell's on-record statement of the Republican's single priority: making Obama a one-term president. Only a fool could expect assistance from a party of such ideologues, especially as they now oppose policies that they previously advocated.

The persistence of sheets in sheep's clothing

The KKK is not a civic-minded group. It is a gang whose sole purpose is to hurt people — not help people. The State of Georgia was absolutely in the right not to allow them to post a sign. It has nothing to do with freedom of speech or any of their rights as individuals. The state does not support street gangs anymore than a gang in sheep's clothing, which is what this KKK group is. The most shocking part about this is — they still exist?

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. If you're smart, you won't gamble with friends, even for small stakes. A big misunderstanding could arise over something rather petty.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Devote your time and attention to situations that could make or save you money. Time and attention will yield large profits down the line.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. Give no credence to advice offered you by someone whom you know doesn't have a tight handle on what you're doing. This person's intentions may be good, but his or her counsel isn't.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. When it comes to a partnership arrangement, let your cohort do all the talking. There is a strong chance your two cents' worth could be the wrong thing at the wrong time.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. The possibilities for achieving your ambitions and objectives look pretty good, even though you might have to contend with some petty frustrations on your road to victory.

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. If the work you're doing requires extreme diligence, have another double-check your efforts, especially details that have to be put in writing. You could easily miss a small oversight.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. One of your greatest obstacles is allowing self-defeating thoughts to overwhelm your thinking. You can control anything you set your mind to, including avoiding all the negatives.

Time of the saison

Summerfest focuses on the beers of summer Above all, though, Drink Craft Beer has one important message — it is, obviously, to drink craft beer

THURSTY

LUKE O'NEIL
TWITTER: @LUKEONEIL47

The beer festival schedule is becoming almost as crowded as the craft beer market itself; it behooves a fledgling fest to specialize. In the case of Jeff Wharton and Devon Regan, the team behind the Drink Craft Beer website, they decided to focus on saison and farmhouse-style beers for Summerfest.

"The idea behind Drink Craft Beer is craft beer education," Wharton explains. "It's about making craft beer fun, getting people out to learn and try some new stuff, but to do it in fun ways."

There's a lot to learn and talk about when it comes to craft beer, but at its heart it's still beer, meant for socializing. The high-level connoisseur market was being served well online when they started the site six years ago, but it was harder for people to learn in a more casual way. That's where events like this come in. Over the years, Wharton has seen the potential audience for their event grow steadily. This will be the largest, with 1,200 people over three weekend sessions.

"There are tons of beer fests around Boston, and lots of good ones," he says. "But how do we put our own spin on it? The idea at the heart of Summerfest is a summer barbecue with everything kicked up a few notches."

Helping to kick it up will be New Englanders like Cambridge Brewing Company, Mystic Brewery and Jack's Abby. And brewers like Harpoon and High and Mighty will showcase brews they've made for the event. All of the 25 brewers will focus on saisons.

Saisons were the traditional beer of choice for Belgian farmhands to drink for hydration while working. While the category is broad, Wharton says they have a spicy yeast profile, are dry and thirst-quenching.

"That said, it's one of those styles where it's more of a way of thought almost than a specific style, which is what we're so stoked about."

Metro does not endorse the opinions of the author, or any opinions expressed on its pages.

Saison, the gateway craft beer

Saisons are a good place to start for craft beer drinking novices, Wharton says.

"The person who likes Sam Adams Summer, most of them are going to like a saison."

It makes sense for the craft beer enthusiast as well, because of the potential for complexity and nuance.

"It's one of those styles that satiates the person who thinks they know everything about beer, but people new to beer are going to find it accessible and enjoy it a lot."

Hot tips from Hot Chip

The UK band's Owen Clarke can keep you moving 'Over and over and over and over' with the band's new album, 'In Our Heads'

Owen Clarke is known for his moves. The Hot Chip multi-instrumentalist can be found in a host of YouTube videos, getting down to his band's beats while slapping the bass or rocking the keys at a gig. There's even a Facebook page called "Owen Clarke — Dancing King." While somewhat modest about his own dance floor capabilities, Clarke does admit there's a very special thing that happens when it comes to playing a gig.

"It's this energy meeting — it sounds sort of hippie-ish but it is kind of true — people come together to see a thing, you go there to do a thing and so, you know, it's set up for a good thing from the outset," he says.

Hot Chip made their mark back in 2006 for creating an irresistibly danceable combination of R&B and synth pop on "The Warning," and three albums later, with the recent release of "In Our Heads," the band finds themselves still keeping the energy level buoyantly blissful.

"Whenever we make a record, we are the same people and we have the same sort of agenda every single time," Clarke says. "There's no sort of plan. There never is, which is how we've ridden our luck for so long, I think … [the songs] just turned out the way they did. That's not a great illumination in terms of an answer but we were just feeling a bit uptempo and happy. It's quite nice when things can turn out like that."

The band's playful sensibility has always been particularly notable when it comes to their music videos, in which more often than not, anyone from a fake boy band to award-winning actor Terence Stamp will be singing their lyrics to the camera. But why have stand-ins when Clarke in particular is such a smooth mover?

"There's a perception of who we are that isn't very close to the actual truth of who we are because we've never put up a front of being guys who are in a rock band, or being aloof and very synth-y, or being anything in particular, regardless of what anyone may or may not think," Clarke says. "It's nice to let the music speak for itself and let the video tell the story that it does with other people. We're not afraid of being in our own videos. It's just nice to let the best people do the best job. We like to make the videos as fun as we can and we don't like to get in the way of that by insisting on being in them and posturing and doing that sort of thing — we save that for being on stage. We don't posture onstage, but, you know."

Get down for city and town

Clarke notes the differences when it comes to an audience in the city and an audience in the 'burbs.

"I think major capitols, they're not stand-offish in any way but they have quite a high expectation. They have lots of touring acts coming through. It's not like you have to win them over, but you sort of have to prove your mettle as it were. Whereas, if you go to places that don't get bands very often, they're very excited to see you. … It varies to a certain degree but in general, it's a positive thing wherever we go."

"World music" is often just a catch-all record store term for traditional music, but for this local band it means a music that embraces the whole world. Their sound, peppered by jazz-influenced improvisational workouts, integrates folk traditions from lands as diverse as Argentina, Italy, Turkey, Ireland, Morocco and Bulgaria into a high-energy alloy they call "global stomp music."

Grammy-nominated Texan singer Kim Burrell, lauded for her fusion of jazz and gospel, is the featured performer at this annual, city-sponsored gospel concert, which also includes local singers Katani Sumner, Melody Laure and Ayana McDonald, all of whom prove that, despite Boston's reputation as a strongly secular city, its spiritual side remains alive and well.

Ready to get Warped

▶ Teen rockers Cherri Bomb will be hard to miss at this year's Warped Tour.

More than 75 bands are playing Vans' popular punk rock carnival this year
Here's a primer on the ones you shouldn't miss

The Vans Warped Tour typically means mosh pits, gallons of sweat, sunburns, crowd surfing, more than 75 bands (some at the height of their popularity, others clawing their way up) and a diverse group of fans eager to see many of their favorite acts live in one day. Here are a few of the acts that we think will make it worth your while to call in sick to work next week.

Headliners

Four Year Strong

Despite the departure of keyboardist Josh Lyford that resulted in Four Year Strong's newest album packing decidedly less oomph than previous LPs, their live performances are still incredibly energetic and exciting. Guitarists Dan O'Connor and Alan Day — who share lead vocal duties — churn out upbeat riffage that fluctuates from pop-punk to hardcore. And, most importantly, Four Year Strong's epic beardedness remains intact.

New Found Glory

Many aspects of the music scene have changed since New Found Glory made their Warped Tour debut in 2001. However, the 15-year veterans of the pop-punk scene are still coming back for more. From their raw self-titled album (2000) to the grown-up and heartfelt content of "Coming Home" (2006) to the introspective "Radiosurgery" (2011), New Found Glory have aged and matured well through the years while maintaining their defining moxie.

Taking Back Sunday

Although Taking Back Sunday have undergone several lineup and sonic changes over the years, their most recent LP is notable because the personnel is exactly the same as during their debut album, "Tell All Your Friends" — allowing for some mingling of the old and the new, from the raw "Cute Without the 'E' (Cut from the Team)," to the anthemic "MakeDamnSure."

▶ Big beards and Hawaiian shirts? That must mean it's Alan Day, left, and Dan O'Connor of Four Year Strong.

Rising Stars

I Fight Dragons

The underdogs shine brightly when it comes to chiptune band I Fight Dragons, who take inspiration from classic video game sound effects and integrate them into music. Their résumé includes the soundtrack for "Scott Pilgrim vs. the World: The Game," a catchy rendition of "I Fight Ganon" (the theme music from "The Legend of Zelda") and a signature hit song, "The Geeks Will Inherit the Earth."

The Ghost Inside

The Ghost Inside play meaningful metal. With the emergence of other heavy hitters in the hardcore genre — including Parkway Drive, We Came as Romans and Of Mice & Men (who are also on Warped Tour) — fans seem to have embraced bands that can throw down brutal breakdowns just as well as they can incorporate meaningful lyrics into their guttural vocals. The Ghost Inside are no exception — in "White Light," off their new album "Get What You Give," singer Jonathan Vigil contemplates his brother's death and the meaning of life.

Cherri Bomb

Cherri Bomb have opened for Foo Fighters and Smashing Pumpkins — impressive feats for any band. The catch? No members of this all-girl band are old enough to vote (rhythm guitarist/keyboardist/vocalist Miranda Miller, the oldest, is 16 and bassist/vocalist Rena Lovelis, the youngest, is only 14). After cutting their teeth on the European festival circuit, Cherri Bomb bring their hard rock style stateside.

Senses Fail

Senses Fail have evolved from the aggressive sound featured on their first two albums, "Let It Enfold You" and "Still Searching." However, their most recent LP, "Follow Your Bliss: The Best of Senses Fail," includes an additional, new four-track EP with classic Senses Fail attitude, skirting the line between alt-rock and post-hardcore.

Underground

Koji

Koji, whose real name is Andrew Shiraki, plays an acoustic set at this year's Warped Tour. However, the Harrisburg, Pa., singer/songwriter's gentle guitar strokes are only one aspect of his life — Koji is also the founder of Colormake, an organization that encourages artists to use music as a platform to raise awareness for political activism. Koji's sound, at times soft and accessible and at times fast and exciting, is worthy of a listen.

Mod Sun

Once upon a time, Derek Smith (now known as Mod Sun) was a more typical performer on Warped Tour when he was the drummer of Scary Kids Scaring Kids. His genre now is best described as sunny, stoner hip-hop, and Mod Sun is the type of niche artist Warped Tour has embraced as it has expanded from its punk rock roots. Mod Sun's ridiculously catchy single, "Happy as F—" may seem like an outdated nod to hippie culture, but Warped Tour could definitely benefit from some happy vibes to cheer up the sullen scene kids.

Skinny Lister

English folk band Skinny Lister make their Warped Tour debut this year. The five-piece band, notable for not having a drummer, use a male-female vocalist combination between Dan Heptinstall and Lorna Thomas, resulting in a warm sound reminiscent of the style of the Head and the Heart. However, Skinny Lister's eclectic style also ventures into sounds like Celtic punk bands Flogging Molly and Dropkick Murphys.

Mod Sun brings his hippie-hop (and huggy Panda sneaks) to the Vans Warped Tour.

OOH LA LA, CAPE COD DINING

Bastille Day is on Saturday, and you'll probably be crossing the bridge this weekend anyway Pain d'Avignon in Hyannis should be on your itinerary

Nosh On

LINDA LABAN
LINDA.LABAN@METRO.US

Bastille Day (July 14) honors an angry mob liberating Paris' most infamous prison. As a wise (non-French) man once sang, "a hungry mob is an angry mob," so naturally Saturday is a day of eating. What better place to "mange" than on-Cape at Pain D'Avignon, which celebrated its 20th year this June.

That's 20 years of baking wonderful breads, Old World style. In 2008, the bakery added a delightful restaurant. It kept the French name — perhaps a wordplay on that famous bridge, Le Pont d'Avignon? — and its classic bistro look of black wainscoting and white linen tablecloths, a monochromatic civility echoed in the uniformed waitstaff, but the menu is colorfully pan-Mediterranean via the Cape.

▶ Pain d'Avignon is across the Sagamore and Bourne bridges, which, come to think of it, both look like the Eiffel Tower on its side.

There's a big nod to mama Italia with light, fluffy ricotta gnocchi paired with peas, zucchini and a squash puree. There's a slap of Greece in the lamb and beef burger with tzatziki and tangy pickles wrapped in a perfect onion foccaia bun. Though a twist on the Nicoise, the salade de poisson fume's pairing of salty in-house smoked cod with fingerling potatoes and hardboiled egg has both hints of New England and Provence.

Simple yet superb, the aile de raie is classic French, however. The just-crisped, succulent skate wing's sweet, dense scallop-like flavor is paired with extremely long, exceptionally tasty long beans and buttery, finely-sieved pommes Robuchon.

With produce from nearby Cape Cod Organic Farms, Surrey Farms and Luscious Organics, Pain d'Avignon's heart remains pure Cape Cod. That seasonal freshness sings in a graceful dessert of small, sweet organic strawberries topped with Pain's crumbled biscotti and local Four Seas lemon ice cream. Understatement isn't uniquely a French art.

Cinemagic from Kraft

Video of Pats owner Robert Kraft reading lines for upcoming Vince Vaughn-Owen Wilson film with bikini-clad actress goes viral Some outraged, some say 'What's the big deal?'

Robert Kraft is a billionaire. He can do just about anything he wants in life. And that's great for him.

But, if we're being honest with ourselves, we know that there's just something awkward about a 71-year-old man constantly prancing around with a 32-year-old blonde.

Said blonde is "actress" Ricki Noel Lander, whose IMDB page shows proof of her past accolades such as Flight Attendant in "Iron Man" and Hot Girl in the TV show "Working Class." In other words, her second home might as well be the Kodak Theatre in late February.

Lander and Kraft have been linked for a few months now, as the duo was seen sitting side-by-side during a Celtics playoff game this past spring. Yesterday their relationship became a tad more public as a YouTube video featuring the duo went viral (it has since been removed by FOX due to copyright issues).

The video contained the Patriots owner reading dialogue with a bikini-clad Lander and ended with Kraft fake-punching a third party (a guy in a blue shirt) while yelling out "F— you! P—!" and "Nut up or move on."

Kraft said in the past that Lander is his "pal." Ya know, the same way that Luke in accounting is your "pal." Two beers after work, then it's straight home.

Lander has apparently found the perfect theatrical sidekick and there's little doubt that when you want to nail down a role, you bring a senior citizen/prominent NFL owner along for the ride.

Who knows, this could lead to bigger and better things for the duo — like Lander refining her role as Hot Girl and Kraft taking on Nursing Home Patient in the fifth episode of the third season of "Mike & Molly."

Remember when

Robert Kraft has been involved in a pair of YouTube-worthy moments in the past.

Super Bowl XXXVI celebration Kraft, prompted by Patriots cornerback Ty Law, began dancing awkwardly on stage in Government Center.

Kissed by a Bledsoe Kraft, being handed the Lamar Hunt trophy after the Patriots beat the Baltimore Ravens to win the AFC title, told former quarterback Drew Bledsoe: "Kiss me on the other cheek," after Bledsoe leaned in the first time.

Fans, Kraft react to video

Robert Kraft addressed the video hours after it was made public, saying "I tried to help Ricki prepare an audition tape for an upcoming Vince Vaughn-Owen Wilson comedy by reading Wilson's lines. I never intended that it would be made public and I regret that it has."

Boston sports fans reacted to the video yesterday.

"It made me sick to my stomach," said Debbie from South Boston. "Tell him to grow up. He has no respect for his wife and [Lander] is a gold digger."

Most men were a bit more forgiving.

"I know his wife passed, but good for him," Adam from East Bridgewater said.

"Whatever, good for him," said Bryan from Winchester.

"She hasn't even been in the ground that long, poor Myra," said Mary Ellen from Plymouth. METRO

Allen makes it official

Ray Allen appeared alongside Pat Riley and Erik Spoelstra Wednesday in his introductory press conference as a member of the defending champion Miami Heat.

Allen downplayed his relationship with Rajon Rondo as one of the main reasons as to why he left Boston.

"I can't say that [those issues] factored into my decision," Allen said. "I think as teammates, we're brothers. I'm around them more than my own family, and there's differences." METRO
